Police in Texas have now arrested a man who's reportedly tried unsuccessfully to kill his girlfriend. And it turns out that Texas has an odd version of the rule of law. Police say 30-year-old Robert Brown, who has a long history of domestic abuse and assaults, recently tried to use a handgun to kill his girlfriend, and authorities did find a loaded .40 caliber gun in the couple's apartment in West Little Rock, a few minutes and $100 short of what would normally be required to get a person off the hook with a lethal weapon. What's more, the couple didn't have an attorney representing them, making Brown the only one, according to local news station KEYE reports. So what then? How does Brown now explain shooting his ex? Well, a judge has ordered Brown, who has a felony record in Tennessee, to pay his ex $8.5,000 in child support.
